Winners of Energy & Utilities IT Executive Awards Announced at Gartner Energy & Utilities Summit.

Bedford, N.H., October 10, 2007 -- Vision Events, a Gartner, Inc. (NYSE: IT), announced the winners of the Energy & Utilities IT Awards at the Annual Gartner Energy & Utilities Summit. Four leading high tech and telecommunications companies in were chosen and honored during the Summit, which was held in Dallas Texas, September 24-26, 2007 at the Gaylord Texan Resort & Conference Center.

"This is the 3rd successful year for the Energy & Utilities Summit, but the first year that we have used the boardroom and awards format" said Charles Badoian, VP of Program Management for the Energy & Utilities Summit. "And the senior IT Executives who attend the Summit are really enthusiastic about seeing the best Energy & Utilities technology providers. They also recognize that high tech and telecommunications companies' innovation and excellence contributes to their success, so they're always eager to cast their votes for our Energy & Utilities IT Summit Technology Awards."

The gathering of 100 pre-qualified senior IT executives from power generation and utility companies who attended the Energy & Utilities Summit completed confidential ballots to select technology providers for the Awards after previewing and learning about new technologies and products in private case study appointments and in the Energy & Utilities Pavilion™. During the September 26 luncheon awards ceremony, corporate sponsors and technology companies were recognized for these achievements:

Most Effective Presentation: Software Provider

Winner: Microsoft

Most Effective Presentation: Service Provider

Winner: Motorola

Best Articulated Value Proposition: Software Provider

Winner: Genesys Telecommunications

Best Articulated Value Proposition: Service Provider

Winner: TATA Consultancy Services Ltd.

The next Energy & Utilities IT Summit takes place in September with a date and time to be announced.
