Gartner Program & Portfolio Management Summit 2017

June 5 – 7 / Orlando, FL
gartnerevents.com/usppmregister

“I gained actionable insights on the future of PMOs and what areas I should be working on in the coming years in order to be of value to my company.”

Anabel Lay, Assistant Vice President, Project Management Office, Banco General, Panama

Key benefits

- Deliver business value that drives innovation and transformation
- Gain actionable advice from visionary guest keynote speakers
- Engage in insightful peer exchanges during our new peer one-on-ones
- Earn up to 15 professional development units (PDUs) from the Project Management Institute (PMI)
Advance your program and portfolio management leadership

To succeed in the digital age, program and portfolio management (PPM) leaders must move past the traditional confines of “technical PPM” to deliver new levels of enterprise agility and business value.

This year at Gartner Program & Portfolio Management Summit 2017, June 5 – 7, in Orlando, FL, you will learn how to advance your PPM leadership, embrace agility as a core capability, and fully exploit the opportunities it presents. Over three intensive days, we will explore how to:

- Expand your role as an influencer and trusted agent of change.
- Proactively support the delivery of strategic business outcomes.
- Accelerate enterprise transformation through positive disruption.

Advance the new PPM culture and your personal program and portfolio management leadership to drive innovation at the speed of business.

Who should attend

- Project management office (PMO) leaders
- Enterprise project management office (EPMO) managers and directors
- Project portfolio managers and directors
- Program and project management leaders
- IT strategists and planners
- Change management leaders

Case Study Speakers

Hear real, hands-on “this is how we made it happen” insight from organizations whose senior executives are working on the relevant and most successful PPM initiatives. Latest case study information will be added to the agenda as it is confirmed at gartnerevents.com/usppmregister.

Keynotes

Guest keynotes

The Six Skills of an Innovator
There’s a big difference between working hard and creating value, and the biggest obstacle we face in innovating and creating value is our own expertise. Kander explains the danger of developing an overconfidence in our skills, intellect and past work with a beginner’s mindset.

Getting a Grip on Innovation: How to Succeed in the Chaordic Zone
The new demands of digital delivery and digital speed have brought project managers and PMOs to the crossroads. As more and more projects fall into the extreme zone, project organizations find themselves dancing at the edge of chaos. To meet market demands and competitive challenges, new mental models for getting results need to be adopted. The Newtonian mindset is fast giving way to the quantum mindset for succeeding in the face of volatility. In this presentation, Doug DeCarlo, author of “extreme Project Management: Using Leadership, Principles, and Tools to Deliver Value in the Face of Volatility,” outlines do-or-die practices and skills for leading and accelerating innovation in today's project-based organizations.

Reimagining Your Future: Building Vision and Influence for Transformation
In a time of unprecedented change and a new generation of digital businesses, consumers and vendors, IT leaders must fight to stay relevant and meet growth targets. Internal transformation is necessary to meet unfiltered demands and address cost challenges driven by an uncertain economy. Transformation starts with assessing the conflicting values of the organization and senior executives. Learn how to use influence, rather than authority, to become a strategic business partner and establish a team vision that aligns across business units and the personal agenda of key leaders.
